CLASS OF 1922 GRADUATES

CLASS DAY EXERCISES HELD WEDNESDAY NIGHT

The Class of 1922 presented their class day program Wednesday night before a large audience of interested citizens and friends. The exercises were held in the school auditorium, as usual, and very few seats were not occupied.

The high school orchestra, which has so generously and so well rendered service for school and other public functions during the past year, played the processional as the class mounted the platform for the purpose of delivering their graduating essays. The program was carried out just as presented in the Avalanche last week, except that invocation and benediction were given by Rev. Doty instead of Rev. Fr. Bosler, who was absent from the city.

It was a fine looking class, as they appeared seated in a semi-circle upon the platform; eight young ladies—Beatrice Austin, Hester Hanson, Ida Walden, Vella Hermann, Agnes Walden, Anna Ruskay, Ruth Taylor and Ruth McCullough, and at the ends of the row was one of the two young men of the class—Earl Nelson and Oscar Taylor.

It seemed to be the general impression that the essays were unusually interesting. The members of the class seemed to have the happy faculty of saying much in a few words, and made the program a pleasure to listen to. Each was well applauded for their efforts. A keen appreciation was manifest by them for the generosity of the citizens and their parents in providing the means of an education, and gratitude was extended the school board and the faculty for their assistance.

We feel certain that we speak the general sentiment of the community when we say that this class has had an honorable school career. The members have been congenial and friendly in their school affairs, industrious in their school work, and in public have proven themselves real ladies and gentlemen. The members of the class of 1922 would be a credit to any community and we are sure in the future each is going to represent the old home town in a manner that is befitting and is an honor to themselves.

The class of 1922 has been thrifty as well as industrious and have left the nice sum of $50.00 which they in their class will, left the school board to be used for the purpose of purchasing a curtain for the stage, an article that is so greatly needed. This is surely generous of the members of the class and is an unselfish act that is deserving of special credit, and we trust that when the curtain is purchased there may be some mark of credit to the class of 1922 placed thereon.

Tonight will be commencement and Prof. Woody of the University of Michigan will present the commencement address. Interest and pleasure will be added to this by several musical numbers. Dr. Keyport, a member of the school board, will present the diplomas. 8:00 o'clock is the time and a good attendance should be there to hear the program and to pay final honors to our class of graduates.

MICHELSON MEMORIAL CHURCH NOTES.

There will be the usual morning service at the Michelson church next Sunday. All are invited to attend. The Odd Fellow Memorial service will be held in the afternoon at two-thirty. There will be no evening service.

NASH OWNERS PARADE FOR MANUFACTURER.

In honor of a visit by President C. W. Nash, of the Nash Motor company of Kenosha, Wis., T. E. Douglas and Jess Schoonover local Nash dealers, invited all Nash owners to be present at the Michigan Central depot Wednesday afternoon to meet him, and by the time the train arrived the street about the depot was clogged with Nash cars.

The visitors were loaded into cars and a parade was formed and a quick trip with tooting of horns, was taken about the city, winding up at the Base ball park. Here the camera man was awaiting them. A semi-circle was formed seventeen cars being in the circle and a panoramic picture was taken of the group.

President Nash said that he felt highly honored by the citizens of Grayling and was glad to see his automobile factory so well represented by the large number of Nash cars. He, with his wife and daughter and several officials of his firm were on their way to Lovella where Mr. Nash has a comfortable summer home on the North Branch of the AuSable river.

By the quick work of the Wingard studio, pictures of the "Nash" party were on exhibition the same evening.

GRAYLING TAKES DOUBLE HEADER

GRAYLING KEEPS UP WINNING STREAK TAKING BOTH GAMES.

Due to the heavy rain Saturday the game to be played that day between the Kosciusko Base ball club of Saginaw and Grayling was called off, and Sunday a double header was played between the two teams, Grayling taking both games.

The first game started at 1:30 o'clock and was one of the most one-sided games played in Grayling for some time, the score ending 27 to 3. The visitors just made one error after another. They came here with the reputation of being the fastest team in the Saginaw valley, but we failed in this game to see where they got the idea. Summerfield for Saginaw failed to check Grayling's heavy hitters. He was relieved in the 6th inning by Gost who did not fare much better. Noa of Gaylord was on the mound for Grayling and pitched a fine game of ball, and he had great support. In this game Grayling scored in every inning, getting from 1 to 4 scores every frame.

The score by innings was:
Kosciusko 1 1 0 0 0 1 0—3-9-7
Grayling 2 1 4 2 5 3 6 x—27-28-2
Struck out by Noa 13; by Summerfield 5; by Gost 2.
Base on balls off Noa 0; off Summerfield 1; off Gost 2.
Two base hits, Milnes 1, W. Laurant 2, E. Johnson 1, Noa 1, Doroh 1; S. Slocum 1; Andreski 2.
Three base hits, Morrow 2.
Batteries for Grayling—Noa and Johnson; for Saginaw, Summerfield and Gost, Goltz.

The second game was a much closer contest, "Nash" Ninerger a six-footer of Saginaw throwing for the visitors. He threw much better ball than either of the two who pitched in the first game, and the team in general all played better behind him, and made it a game worth seeing. Laurant for Grayling pitched a fine brand of ball and allowed the visitors a few scattered hits but with the work of Grayling in the field and on the sacks they were unable to get all around. Doroh Grayling's left fielder made some pretty catches during the games and blanked the visitors from making possible runs. Only seven innings were played in the second game and the score was 3 to 1.

The score by innings was:
Kosciusko 0 0 0 1 0 0 0—1-7-3
Grayling 1 0 0 1 1 0 x—3-5-1
Struck out by Laurant 4; by Ninerger 2.
Bases on balls, off Laurant 0; off Ninerger 3.
Two base hits, W. Laurant 1; Andreski 1.
Batteries for Grayling—Laurant and Johnson. For Saginaw—Ninerger and Goltz.
Umpires—Duclos and Goltz.

Farm Bureau Notes

R. D. BAILEY
County Agricultural Agent

Two More.

Last week Friday two more of our progressive farmers made another step in the right direction.

John McGillis, of South Branch Township, and Joseph Burton for his Beaver Creek farm each received from the north-bound cannon ball a splendid registered purebred Holstein bull.

We have been looking for these animals quite a while. Naturally, we felt quite excited when the train rolled in bearing them to our midst. To some the purchase of a splendid animal may not seem to be much of an event; but, thoughtful people of town or country can certainly see that only through the coming of choice dairy stock will our farming ever amount to much.

Proud of the List.
Since I became County Agent the following have secured registered purebred Holsteins:
Wm. G. Feldhauser, Conrad Howse, F. A. Goshorn, George Annis, Joseph Burton, Andrew Mortenson, A. B. Failing and John McGillis have secured bulls.
Herman Wendt and Charles Hazard have secured heifers.

Orders for Others.
I have orders to find another heifer and two more bulls. This is what I call "encouraging."

Others, Too.
I feel certain that several others of our progressive farmers are on the verge of giving orders for heifer calves, bred heifers, bull calves or mature bulls.

Don't Borrow Trouble.
Now, don't lie awake nights fearing that we will soon have too many of such stock in here.

The more we have the better off we are. We certainly should keep on until there is not a scrub bull left in the county. Anyone will agree that a scrub bull is a nuisance.

There certainly can be no objection to having every cow in the county a pure-bred or a high-grade, for that has proven very profitable in all other counties where they have tried it.

Crawford County can become like Livingston County, Michigan, and Jefferson County, Wisconsin, or New-

INDIANS CLAIM CANADIAN PARK

MOUNTED POLICE ON GUARD TO HEAD OFF TRIBESMEN AT POINT, PELEE.

300 WANT TO SETTLE ON LAND

Maintain That Old Treaty Made By British in 1749 Entitles Indians Possession.

Leamington, Ont.—Encamped within the precincts of the Dominion government's national park, at Point Pelee, seven miles east of this little south Essex town, a small detachment of Royal Canadian mounted police, under command of Sergeant A. Birt-whistle, Monday night awaited the coming of a band of some 300 full-blooded Indians, who have announced their intention of taking possession of many hundreds of thousands of acres of the finest farm lands in western Ontario.

The Indians claim the land under an old British treaty of 1749. The government, through its department of Indian affairs, at Ottawa, has notified Forest H. Conover, superintendent of the Point Pelee park, that the Indians must be treated as trespassers in case they attempt to encroach upon the government park.

An advance guard, consisting of two families and numbering about 15, reached Point Pelee several days ago, and are camping in an old wooden house on what is known as alienated lands, just outside the park preserves.

Among them is Archie Dodge, an Indian of the Pottowatomie tribe, who claims to be a great grandson of the last chief of the Pottowatomie. Dodge who came here from Avilston, was intercepted by Sergeant Birtwhistle and catechized concerning the plans of the Indians to take up their quarters inside the park.

Dodge, who is 23 years old, explained that the men of his tribe were the original settlers on the lands along Lake Erie's shores, where is now located the Pelee national park, and that they had left this section of country about 1836. Included in the band now on the way here, are Ojibways, Pottowatomies and Ottawas.

The lands which the Indians now declare they are entitled to extend from Point Pelee, which is the most southerly point in the Canadian mainland, east to Sturgeon Creek, a distance of 10 miles, and to the town of Wheatly 11 miles east of Leamington.

THE INDIAN DRUM

SLUGGED!

SYNOPSIS.—Wealthy and highly placed in the Chicago business world, Benjamin Corvet is something of a recluse and a mystery to his associates. After a stormy interview with his partner, Henry Spearman, Corvet seeks Constance Sherrill, daughter of his other business partner, Lawrence Sherrill, and secures from her a promise not to marry Spearman until he returns. He then disappears. Sherrill learns Corvet has written to a certain Alan Conrad, in Blue Rapids, Kansas, and exhibited strange agitation over the matter. Corvet's letter summons Conrad, a youth of unknown parentage, to Chicago. Alan arrives in Chicago. From a statement of Sherrill it seems probable Conrad is Corvet's illegitimate son. Corvet has deeded his house and its contents to Alan, who takes possession. That night Alan discovers a man ransacking the desks and bureau drawers in Corvet's apartments. The appearance of Alan tremendously agitates the intruder, who appears to think him a ghost and raves of "the Miwaka." After a struggle the man escapes. Next day Alan learns from Sherrill that Corvet has deeded his entire property to him. Introduced to Spearman, Alan is astonished at the discovery that he is the man whom he had fought in his house the night before. Alan tells no one of his strange encounter, but in a private interview takes Spearman with the fact. Spearman laughs at and denies him. Spearman poisons Constance's mind against Alan.

CHAPTER VIII—Continued.

"You're a Chippewa, aren't you, Judah?" Alan asked.

"Yes."

"Your people live at the other end of the lake, don't they?"

"Yes, Alan."

"Have you ever heard of the Indian Drum they talk about up there, that they say sounds when a ship goes down on the lake?"

The Indian's eyes sparkled excitedly.

"Yes," he said.

"Do you believe in it?"

"Not just believe; I know. Everybody knows that it sounds for those who die on the lake. I have heard it. It sounded for my father."

"How was that?"

"Like this. My father sold some bullocks to a man on Beaver Island. The man kept store on Beaver Island. Alan, no Indian liked him. He would not hand anything to an Indian or wrap anything in paper for an Indian. Say it was like this: An Indian comes in to buy salt pork. First the man would get the money. Then, Alan, he would take his hook and gull the pork up out of the barrel and throw it on the dirty floor for the Indian to pick up. He said Indians must take their food off of the floor—like dogs."

"My father had to take the bullocks to the man, across to Beaver Island. At first the Indians did not know who the bullocks were for, so they helped him. When they found out the bullocks were for the man on Beaver Island, the Indians would not help him any longer. He had to take them across alone. Besides, it was bad weather, the beginning of a storm.

"You're a Chippewa, Aren't You, Judah?" Alan Asked.

"He went away, and my mother went to pick berries—I was small then. Pretty soon I saw my mother coming back. She had no berries, and her hair was hanging down, and she was weeping. She took me in her arms and said my father was dead. Other Indians came around and asked her how she knew, and she said she heard the Drum. The Indians found my father's body."

"Did you ever hear of a ship called the Miwaka, Judah?"

"That was long ago," the Indian answered.

"They say that the Drum beat wrong when the Miwaka went down—that it was one beat short of the right number."

"That was long ago," Wassaquam merely repeated.

"Did Mr. Corvet ever speak to you about the Miwaka?"

"No; he asked me once if I had ever heard the Drum. I told him."

Wassaquam removed the dinner and brought Alan a desert. He returned to stand in the place across the table that Alan had assigned to him, and stood looking down at Alan, steadily and thoughtfully.

"Do I look like any one you ever saw before, Judah?" Alan inquired of him.

"No."

"Is that what you are thinking?"

"That is what I was thinking. Will coffee be served in the library, Alan?"

Alan crossed to the library and seated himself in the chair where his father had been accustomed to sit. Wassaquam brought him the single small cup of coffee, lit the spirit lamp on the smoking stand and moved that over; then he went away. When he had finished his coffee, Alan went into the smaller connecting room and recommenced his examination of the drawers under the bookshelves. At ten o'clock, Alan stopped his search and went back to the chair in the library. He dozed; for he awoke with a start and a feeling that some one had been bending over him, and gazed up into Wassaquam's face. The Indian had been scrutinizing him with intent, anxious inquiry. He moved away, but Alan called him back.

"When Mr. Corvet disappeared, Judah, you went to look for him up at Manitowish, where he was born—at least Mr. Sherrill said that was where you went. Why did you think you might find him there?" Alan asked.

"In the end, I think, a man maybe goes back to the place where he began. That's all, Alan."

"In the end? What do you mean by that? What do you think has become of Mr. Corvet?"

"I think now—Ben's dead."

"What makes you think that?"

"Nothing makes me think; I think it myself."

"I see. You mean you have no reason more than others for thinking it; but that is what you believe."

"Yes." Wassaquam went away, and Alan heard him on the back stairs, ascending to his room.

When Alan went up to his own room, after making the rounds to see that the house was locked, a droning chant came to him from the third floor. He paused in the hall and listened. Then went up to the floor above. A flickering light came to him through the half-open door of a room at the front of the house; he went a little way toward it and looked in. Two thick candles were burning before a crucifix, below which the Indian knelt, prayer book in hand and rocking to and fro as he droned his supplications.

A word or two came to Alan, but without them Wassaquam's occupation was plain; he was praying for the repose of the dead—the Catholic chant taught to him, as it had been taught undoubtedly to his fathers, by the French Jesuits of the lakes. The intoned chant for Corvet's soul, by the man who had heard the Drum, followed and still came to Alan, as he returned to the second floor.

He had not been able to determine, during the evening, Wassaquam's attitude toward him. Having no one else to trust, Alan had been obliged to put a certain amount of trust in the Indian; so as he had explained to Wassaquam that morning that the desk and the drawers in the little room off Corvet's had been forced, and had warned him to see that no one, who had not proper business there, entered the house. Wassaquam had appeared to accept this order; but now Wassaquam had implied that it was not because of Alan's order that he had refused reporters admission to the house.

Alan started and went quickly to the open door of his room, as he heard voices now somewhere within the house. One of the voices he recognized as Wassaquam's; the other indistinct, thick, accusing—was unknown to him; it certainly was not Spearman's. He descended swiftly to the first floor, and found Wassaquam standing in the front hall, alone.

"Who was here, Judah?" Alan demanded.

"A man," the Indian answered stolidly. "He was drunk; I put him out."

"What did he come for?"

"He came to see Ben. I put him out; he is gone, Alan."

Alan flung open the front door and looked out, but he saw no one.

"What did he want of Mr. Corvet, Judah?"

"I do not know. I told him Ben was not here; he was angry, but he went away."

"Has he ever come here before?"

"Yes; he comes twice."

"He has been here twice?"

"More than that; every year he comes twice, Alan. Once he came often."

"How long has he been doing that?"

"Since I can remember."

"Is he a friend of Mr. Corvet?"

"No friend—no!"

"But Mr. Corvet saw him when he came here?"

"Always, Alan."

"And you don't know at all what he came about?"

"How should I know? No; I do not."

Alan got his coat and hat. The sudden disappearance of the man might mean only that he had hurried away, but it might mean, too, that he was still lurking near the house. Alan had decided to make the circuit of the house and determine that. But as he came out on to the porch, a figure more than a black away to the south strode with uncanny step into the light of a street lamp, halted and faced about, and shook his fist back at the house. Alan dragged the Indian out on to the porch.

"Is that the man, Judah?" he demanded.

"Yes, Alan."

Alan ran down the steps and at full speed after the man. But when he reached the corner, he was nowhere in sight. Alan retraced his steps for several blocks, still looking; then he gave it up and returned east toward the Drive.

The side street leading to the Drive was not well lighted; dark entry ways and alleys opened on it; but the night was clear. Alan could see at the end of the street, beyond the yellow glow of the distant boulevard lights, the smooth, chill surface of the lake. A white light rode above it; now, below the white light, he saw a red speck—the masthead, and port lanterns of a steamer northward bound. Farther out, a second white glow appeared from behind the obscuration of the buildings and below it a green speck—a starboard light. Information he had gained enabled him to recognize in these lights two steamers passing one another at the harbor mouth.

His thoughts turned to Constance Sherrill. Events since he had talked with her that morning had put them far apart once more; but, in another way, they were being drawn closer together. For he knew now that she was caught as well as he in the mesh of consequences of acts not their own.

He staggered, slipped, fell suddenly forward upon his knees, under a stunning, crushing blow upon his head from behind. Thought, consciousness almost lost, he struggled, twisting himself about to grasp at his assailant. He caught the man's clothing, trying to drag himself up; fighting blindly, dazedly, unable to see or think, he shouted aloud and then again, aloud. He seemed in the distance to hear answering cries; but the weight and strength of the other was bearing him down again to his knees; he tried to slip aside from it, to rise. Then another blow, crushing and sickening, descended on his head; even hearing left him, and, unconscious, he fell forward on to the snow and lay still.

CHAPTER IX.

A Walk Beside the Lake.

"The name seems like Sherrill," the interne agreed. "He said it before when we had him on the table upstairs; and he has said it now twice distinctly—Sherrill."

"His name, do you think?"

"I shouldn't say so; he seems trying to speak to some one named Sherrill. There are only four Sherrills in the telephone book, two of them in Evanston and one way out in Minnetonka."

"The other?"

"They're only about six blocks from where he was picked up; but they're on the Drive—the Lawrence Sherrills."

The interne whistled softly and looked more interestedly at his patient's features. "He'll be conscious some time during the day, there's only a slight fracture, and—perhaps you'd better call the Sherrill house, anyway. If he's not known there, no harm done; and if he's one of their friends and he should."

The nurse nodded and moved off. Thus it was that at a quarter to five Constance Sherrill was awakened by the knocking of one of the servants at her father's door. Her father went down stairs to the telephone instrument where he might reply without disturbing Mrs. Sherrill. Constance, kimono over her shoulders, stood at the top of the stairs and waited. It became plain to her at once that whatever had happened had been to Alan Conrad.

"Yes. . . . Yes. . . . You are

One ingenious if dishonest native of India turned his dark skin to excellent account. One of the European examiners of Calcutta university, says Lord Frederic Hamilton in his book "Days Before Yesterday" told me that there had been a great deal of trouble about the examination papers; by some means or other the native students always managed to obtain what we may term "advanced" copies of the papers. My informant had accordingly devised a scheme to stop the leakage. Instead of having the papers printed in the usual fashion he called in the services of a single white printer on whom he could rely. The white printer received the papers early on the morning of the day designated for the examination and duly set them up on a hand press inside the building. He had one assistant, a coolie who was clad only in loin cloth and turban; by no possibility could he conceal any papers about his person.

In spite of these precautions, however, it soon became clear at the examination that some of the students had a previous knowledge of the questions. How had they managed it? Eventually it appeared that the coolie, taking advantage of the momentary absence of the white printer, had slipped off his loin cloth, sat down on the "form" and then replaced his solitary garment. When he was obliged to strip on going out the printing ink did not show on his dark skin; and all that he had to do was to sit down on a large sheet of white paper on the questions to be printed off on it. Then, with the aid of a mirror, the students could easily read them. The oriental mind is subtle.

Glass Resists Fire.

There is a product called "wire glass," which, it appears, presents a most effective barrier against fire. It consists simply of a meshwork of wire embedded in a glass plate. Even when drenched by flames and heated to a red heat it does not fall to pieces, and it has been shown in many cases that, employed in windows and skylights, wire-glass not only resists the heat or fire, but also the shattering effects of cold water poured over it while it is yet glowing hot.

understand it involved something a good deal worse, perhaps, than anything that could have been involved if he had only gone away. The facts we had made it certain that what had happened to him was death at the hands of another—he must have foreseen that death and, seeking no protection for himself. . . . It implied, that he preferred to die rather than to ask protection—that there was something whose concealment he thought mattered even more to him than life.

It might have meant that he considered his life was . . . due to whom ever took it? Her voice, which had become very low, now ceased. She was speaking to Alan of his father—a father whom he had never known, and whom he could not have recognized by sight until she showed him the picture a few weeks before; but she was speaking of his father.

"Mr. Sherrill didn't feel that it was necessary for him to do anything, even though he thought that?"

"If Mr. Corvet was dead, we could do him no good, surely, by telling this to the police; if the police succeeded in finding out all the facts, we would be doing only what Uncle Benny did not wish—what Uncle Benny did not wish. We could not tell the police about it without telling them all about Mr. Corvet, too. So father would not let himself believe that you had been attacked to be killed. He had to believe the police theory was sufficient."

Alan made no comment at once. "Wassaquam believes Mr. Corvet is dead," he said finally. "He told me so. Does your father believe that?"

"I think he is beginning to believe it."

"I've not told any one," he said, now watching her, "how I happened to be out of the house that night. I followed a man who came there to the house. Wassaquam did not know his name. He did not know Mr. Corvet was gone; for he came there to see Mr. Corvet. He was not an ordinary friend of Mr. Corvet's; but he had come there often. Wassaquam did not know why. Wassaquam had sent the man away, and ran out after him; but I could not find him."

He stopped an instant, studying her. "That was not the first man who came to the house," he went on quickly, as she was about to speak. "I found a man in Mr. Corvet's house the first night that I spent there. Wassaquam was away, you remember, and I was alone in the house."

"A man there in the house?" she repeated.

"He was going through Mr. Corvet's things—not the silver and all that, but through his desks and files and cases. He was looking for something—something which he seemed to want very much; when I interfered, he greatly excited him. I frightened him. He thought I was a ghost."

"A ghost. Whose ghost?"

He shrugged. "I don't know; some one whom he seemed to have known pretty well—and whom Mr. Corvet knew, he thought."

"Why didn't you tell us this before?"

"At least—I am telling you now, Miss Sherrill. I frightened him, and he got away. But I had seen him plainly. I can describe him."

You've talked with your father of the possibility that something might happen to me such as, perhaps, happened to Mr. Corvet. If anything does happen to me, a description of the man may . . . prove useful."

"The clearly said definitely as he could, he described Spearman to her. She did not recognize the description; he had known she would not. Had not Spearman been in Duluth? Beyond "That night when you were hurt—it was for robbery, they said. What do you think about it?"

"He was looking at her and then away; but his face was completely expressionless."

"The proceedings were a little too rapid for me to judge, Miss Sherrill."

"But there was no demand upon you to give over your money before you were attacked?"

"No."

She breathed a little more quickly. "It must be a strange sensation," she observed, "to know that some one has tried to kill you."

"It must, indeed."

"You mean you didn't think that he tried to kill you?"

"I was hardly in a condition, Miss Sherrill, to appreciate anything about the man at all. Why do you ask?"

"Because," she hesitated an instant, "if you were attacked to be killed, it meant that you must have been attacked as the son of—Mr. Corvet. Then that meant—at least it implied—that Mr. Corvet was killed, that he did not go away. You see that, of course."

"Were you the only one who thought that? Or did some one speak to you about it?"

"No one did; I spoke to father. He thought—"

"Yes."

"Well, if Mr. Corvet was murdered—I'm following what father thought, you that, was not connection of Spearman with the prowler in Corvet's house the one connection of all most difficult for her to make?

They were silent as they went on toward her home. He had said all he could, or dared to say; to tell her that the man had been Spearman would not merely have awakened her incredulity; it would have destroyed credence utterly. A definite change in their relation to one another had taken place during their walk. The fullness, the frankness of the sympathy there had been between them almost from their first meeting, had gone; she was quite aware, he saw, that he had not frankly answered her questions; she was aware that in some way he had drawn back from her and shut her out from his thoughts about his own position here. But he had known that this must be so; it had been his first definite realization after his return to consciousness in the hospital when, knowing now her relation to Spearman, he had found all questions which concerned his relations with the people here made immeasurably more acute by the attack upon him.

She asked him to come in and stay for luncheon, as they reached her home, but she asked it without urging; at his refusal she moved slowly up the steps.

"You got Ben Corvet; you tell him Luke's story."

"It Must Be a Strange Sensation," She Observed, "to Know That Someone Has Tried to Kill You."

Important to all Women
Readers of this Paper

Thousands upon thousands of women have kidney or bladder trouble and never suspect it.

Women's complaints often prove to be nothing else but kidney trouble, or the result of kidney or bladder disease.

If the kidneys are not in a healthy condition, they may cause the other organs to become diseased.

You may suffer pain in the back, headache and loss of ambition.

Poor health makes you nervous, irritable and may be dependent; it makes any one so.

But hundreds of women claim that Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, by restoring health to the kidneys, proved to be just the remedy needed to overcome such conditions.

Many send for a sample bottle to see what Swamp-Root, the great kidney, liver and bladder medicine, will do for them. By enclosing ten cents to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., you may receive sample size bottle by Express Post. You can purchase medium and large size bottles at all drug stores.—Advertisement.

COUSIN CHEETAH

"I'm a cousin of yours," said Cousin Cheetah, to the Leopard in the next cage at the zoo.

"But I haven't your ways," said the Leopard, "and of that fact I rejoice."

"I didn't know you did much rejoicing," said Cousin Cheetah.

"Oh, yes," replied the Leopard. "Why did you say that?" he added.

"Because I knew you were a wild creature and that you were not friendly with the keeper, and I also knew that you did very little but dream of the days gone by."

"I wouldn't call any of that rejoicing."

"Perhaps not," said the Leopard. "And what you say is quite, quite true."

"But still I can rejoice that I am not like you, for you are too gentle for my tastes."

"I do not believe in being too friendly with the keeper. I want to let him know that I am the Leopard and not his little pet."

"I'm a big strong ferocious animal and I'm used to being with wild actions and great wild freedom."

"I do not want him to think that he has tamed me and made a little lap dog of me."

"One would hardly call you a lap dog," said Cousin Cheetah.

"Of that fact I too rejoice," said the Leopard.

"You talk so strangely," said Cousin Cheetah.

"I like to be different," said the Leopard.

"Yes, Cousin Cheetah," the Leopard continued after a few minutes, "you are even different in looks. You have spots like dark circles and I have great and magnificent spots."

"Then in the wild, free days you were never wild as I was. You hunted sheep and deer it is true, but you weren't a real hunter."

"And as for a man—why you could be as friendly with a man as these lap dogs you were talking of a few minutes ago. The old Illyena is the same way—he won't hurt a man if he can avoid it."

"Yes, he is even frightened. Now I'm not saying I'm a man-hunting animal but I'm not what you might call on friendly terms with any of them.

"And so I do not want the Keeper to think I've lost these wild ways. Some Leopard might not feel so strongly about it as I do."

"But I won't change my ways. And it is strange that you are so gentle and mild when you're so big and enormous and strong and powerful."

"Strange," said Cousin Cheetah, "but true. Ah, yes, it is true."

"I have lovely long legs and a rather thin, graceful looking body. My head is small and my spots or circles are not very large."

"I am known as the Hunting Leopard because when I was free I was taught by men to hunt with them for antelope."

"There aren't so many of us about as there are of the regular Leopards, so that we're more of a treat."

"Modest," granted the Leopard scornfully.

And then he looked upon Cousin Cheetah with more of a scornful look than ever as he saw the keeper come up to the Cheetah and pet him and stroke him while the Cheetah looked happier and friendlier at each bit of stroking and of petting.

Such a tame creature as Cousin Cheetah was, and yet he had been considered a splendid runner when he was free and a good hunter too!

Wraps for Summer Trips; Knitted Accessories

THE least showy and conspicuous of our friends often proves to be the best friend in need, and so it is with coats and wraps. Now that the time for summer journeys is here, ask the unexperienced globe-trotter, and she will tell you to begin your outfitting with a practical, roomy coat, made of a soft, warm material, in a neutral or dark color. Whether your path leads to the mountains or the sea, the tropics or the desert, take the sweater has been multiplied to suit occasion, scarfs have been varied for the same reason, hats and bags to match them have joined the cheerful company of knitted accessories. These things, and others, are taken as a matter of course in the wardrobe, while emphasis is placed on the kind of yarns employed and on style and color.

Knitted things, including dresses, are especially voguish for sportswear.

a sturdy coat along, for you will have need of it.

One does not acquire a coat of this kind for a single journey or a single season, therefore eccentricities of style are not among its possessions. We may count on straight lines, youthful and mannish styles to be long-lived and not affected by passing whims of fashion, but entirely comfortable. Such a coat is shown at the right of the two pictured here. It is provided with capacious pockets, an ample collar and is loosely belted. Made of homespun, tweed, duvetyu and camel-hair and similar coatings, it is the tourist's delight.

The coat at the left of the picture proclaims itself as of this season with its wide, capelike sleeves, but it is but their usefulness does not beguile and there, unless we make "spots" wear a term of very wide application. Knitted garments, cleverly styled, appear almost everywhere. Many of them are products of wonderful looms and many of them are hand-knitted—the latter having the usual prestige of handwork over machine work. Now that they are so fashionable it is well worth while to learn to knit. Women find it fascinating work, good for the nerves—and an important relief to the strain on their pocketbooks.

A novice might make a beginning in the gentle art of knitting by copying the pretty scarf of Iceland wool shown here at the right of the illustration. A fine zephyr, in any color desired, is used for it and the border of stripes a candidate for the position of traveling company and has much to recommend it. Where only one wrap is to be taken along for a journey or visit, it is prepared to serve for all sorts of occasions, and will prove as good a choice as any. It has a convertible collar and long girdle of the material. In beige color or tan and lined with soft satin to match it will harmonize with everything.

Already coats for fall are occupying the attention of manufacturers. They assure us that lines will continue straight and sleeves large. Even if these details are changed, the straight-line, ample coats of today are a good investment. There will be no great difficulty in changing off a little of the amplexity that Fashion approves this summer if she changes her mind by fall. Coats can't grow larger—they may become smaller.

Striding along, keeping pace with the ever-increasing disposition to out-dooring, many knitted things have been added to the belongings of women.

In contrasting colors, may suit individual fancy.

The slip-over sweater at the left is machine-knitted and may be had in almost any color. It is a practical and youthful affair with a "U" neck, elbow sleeves, and fancy border, banded with white. The collar and cuffs match the border and a narrow knitted belt, having no particular business, is there because it is there, to make a pretty finish. It buttons at each side after crossing at the front.

Just at the moment many slip-over sweaters are shown in gay colors with horizontal stripes in white, or white interwoven with the color, and manufacturers are featuring sweaters in white with horizontal stripes in Navajo patterns. They are fine for sports wear. The tuxedo maintains its place for older people.

Fancy Belts Are Good. The fancy belt is still good, and mother-of-pearl may take the place of steel. Lanvin, in a number of her tailored suits, features a plaited leather belt, which is very often made of black patent leather. Chanel, on the other hand, uses brown leather with her tweed sport suits. Lanvin is reviving the little white plaited frills which she is using on the collar of her suits. Other houses are also using the lingerie collar of the lingerie dress to cut in the V front which is beginning to replace the bateau neckline.

Little Girl's Coat. Coats for the six-year old are shown in the same tweeds and homespun as mother's, and hats of the same material are shown with them, in many cases.

Summery Hats. Large poke hats of black horsehair braid or nudes are among the prettiest summer hats.

DAIRY HINTS

SECRETS OF DAIRY SUCCESS

Two Big Things Are Proper Care and Feed, Says Specialist of Oklahoma College.

"Two great secrets in dairying which have been the reason for the success of thousands of dairymen are proper feeding of cows and proper care of cows," says A. C. Baer, head of the Dairy Husbandry department of Oklahoma Agricultural and Mechanical college.

"Thousands of cows would be profitable and good cows if they were given a chance; if they were properly fed, housed, and cared for."

"Good feeding means to give cows enough feed to produce milk and the right kind of feed to produce milk. Most of the feed for cows ought to be grown on Oklahoma farms. Alfalfa hay is the best dairy cow feed which can be grown. Corn and sorghums, such as kafir and darso, can be grown for the silo. Ensilage on a dairy farm or any farm where dairy cows are kept provides succulent feed and is indispensable."

"Most of the grain for cow feeding can be grown on the average Oklahoma farm. A good grain mixture for milk cows is as follows: 4 parts ground oats, 3 parts corn or alfalfa meal, 3 parts ground kafir, 1 part cut tressed hay."

"A dairy cow needs about one pound of grain for three or four pounds of milk produced. Dairy cows should be fed grain individually according to the amount of milk for growth if immature, and at times to produce gain in weight."

"Dairy cattle will respond to good care. Every Oklahoma farm where cows are kept should have at least a good shed to protect the cows from bad weather and cold winds. A blanket in very cold weather will pay for itself in a very short time. Every dairy cow should be cleaned and brushed regularly. It helps to keep her in better health."

DAIRY COWS RETURN PROFIT

High-Producing Animals Are Usually Most Economical in Matter of Food Consumed.

Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.

High-producing dairy cows are nearly always economical producers, says the United States Department of Agriculture in replying to an inquirer who asked for a comparison of purebred and grade cows as to economy of production. If a herd of purebred cows has greater ability to produce milk and butter fat than a herd of grades, it will return more milk and butter fat for the feed consumed. As a rule purebreds are bred for high production, and just to the extent that they are higher producers than the grades they may be expected to return more for the feed they use. But purebreds are not always high producers.

Scrub Cows Are Not Worth Their Keep.

The ratio is not constant between the quantity of feed consumed and the quantity of milk produced. The records of cow-testing associations show that the cows that produced 10,000 pounds of milk a year ate only 55 per cent more feed than those that produced 5,000 pounds of milk a year. The cows that made 7,500 pounds of milk a year ate only 25 per cent more than those that made 5,000 pounds of milk a year. These figures are based on thousands of records.

GRAIN BOOSTED MILK FLOW

Large Increase Obtained by Minnesota Community by Feeding While on Pasture.

Twenty-one dairy herds in the Blue Earth County Cow Testing association averaged 7,120 pounds of milk and 285 pounds of butterfat per cow in 1920. Nineteen herds in the same association averaged 8,500 pounds of milk and 345 pounds of butterfat per cow in 1921. The percentage of gain in milk in 1921 over 1920 was 19.3; in butterfat, 21. The tester in charge in his annual report to University farm says:

"I attribute this gain to better care and feeding. The cows were fed a grain ration the year round, thus keeping up the production during the late summer months when it usually drops because of short pastures."

Value of Boarder Cow. Saving $55 or $60 worth of feed for a boarder cow added to what she'll bring as dressed meat means maybe a hundred dollars in the pocket, which isn't a bad price for a cow that's no good anyway.

Get Cow Into Shape. In order to get the cow into the best physical shape for the calving time, it is advisable to feed her some linseed oil, a quart of the raw product per dose, as this will clean out her digestive tract.

Determine Boarder Cow. The "boarder" in the herd can only be determined by the use of the weight scales and the Babcock butter-fat test.

Choose Between Milk and Fles. Take your choice between fat and milk; the energy a cow uses when badly pastured with fles can't go into milk production.

Raise Record Breakers. Use purebred sires and raise record breakers.

Aunt Jane Not Now Quite as Considerate as She Had Been in the Courtship Days.

In the days when Uncle Joe and Aunt Jane were courting they sat in the garden one night under a summer moon, silent and adoring.

"Joe, dear," suddenly said Aunt Jane at last, "I want to ask you something."

"Ask me anything, darling."

"Something is tickling my neck," she whispered. "If I let go one of your hands to drive it away would you mind very much?"

Their home is now noted for its extreme neatness, and Uncle Joe has been thoroughly trained to keep it neat; how thoroughly is shown by the fact that on a recent afternoon he went into the kitchen to get a drink. For a moment Uncle Joe stood before the sink gazing at the shining faucets. "Guess you've just washed up the sink, ain't you?" he inquired at last.

"Yes, I have," she replied. "Why?"

"Well," exclaimed Uncle Joe, with a slight sigh, "I did think I'd relish a drink of water, but I guess I can get along without it."—Los Angeles Times.

Two colored ball teams were assembled and were about to start their game, but discovered one of their fielders missing. Their captain asked for someone from the crowd to fill the fielder's place. A tall gent said he had some experience, so they put him in the game. Everything went all right till it came his turn at bat. After the new comer had swung at two pitched balls he connected with the next one and it went soaring over the fence. The crowd all began to yell "Run! Run!" But he didn't get it, and turning to the crowd he shouted: "Run nothing. I'll buy them another ball!"

Cutting Off the Last Word.

Archaeologists have recently been puzzled over the finding of the headless body of an Egyptian princess in an ancient tomb. It seems that the question as to how the lady lost her head is important in archeologic circles.

In certain Oriental countries it is customary for the head of the house, in the event of a domestic argument, to behead the lady, thus cutting the lady as well as the argument short. Doubtless, the last words that issued from the lips of the headless princess were: "Where have you been?" Judge.

CROWD CAUGHT IN SMALL BOATS

Frantic Efforts Made to Reach Safety
But 38 are Drowned; Ferris Wheel Wrecked.

New York—A violent storm, accompanied by shifting winds that reached a velocity of 88 miles an hour, took

A woman and her seven-year-old daughter were crushed to death and several other persons injured when an oak tree blown by the wind crashed through the roof to the crowded dining room of the Red Lion inn, on Boston post road, carrying ney.

Miss Edna Smith, 17, walking with a companion along the reservoir road at Ossining, was blown into the water and drowned.

Charles Emerson, New Rochelle

in Echo Bay with his wife and three

CONSCIENCE TO GUIDE NO MORE

Chicago Finds It Necessary to Adopt
Stringent Beach Rules.

Chicago—Let your conscience be your guide—but not as to bathing suits; for those, read the city ordinance.

This was the dictum of Deputy Commissioner of Public Works Burkhardt, on the eve of the formal opening of bathing beaches.

"We tried the conscience rule once," said the commissioner. "As a result of that experiment the city ordinance this year will govern bathing suits. The conscience of some habitués of the beaches is a trifle too elastic."

GRAIN RUST WAR IS ARRANGED

nearly 40 hours—these were among the experiences of Cadet Raymond eastern Lee county June 8. He was timore several days ago. The Me-cause of the transfer.

THE HOME OF THE SOUL.

In olden times, it was believed that the seat of the soul was the stomach, most likely for the reason that a man is never so completely used up as when his stomach is out of order. For the cure of ordinary stomach troubles, there is nothing quite so prompt and satisfactory as Chamberlain's Tablets.
They strengthen the stomach and enable it to perform its functions naturally. Give them a trial. They only cost a quarter.

WHY SUFFER FROM RHEUMA- TISM.

Do you know that nine out of every ten cases of rheumatism are simply rheumatism of the muscles or chronic rheumatism, neither of which require any internal treatment? The pain may be relieved by applying Chamberlain's Liniment, which makes sleep and rest possible, and that certainly means a great deal to any one afflicted with rheumatism.

TO APPEAL WAGE CUTS TO HARDING

LEADERS OF 1,200,000 RAILWAY WORKERS TO SEND LETTER TO PRESIDENT.

FURTHER REDUCTION FEARED

Unions' Chiefs Say It Is Impossible to Maintain American Standard of Living on New Rates.

Cincinnati, O.—President Harding will be appealed to by the leaders of 1,200,000 railway workers, part of whom have already received wage cuts from the Railroad labor board, due July 1, in an effort to stave off further reductions in their pay envelopes. It was decided at a conference of rail union heads Thursday night.

Leaders of the 11 railway employees organizations, which have decided to take a strike vote of their memberships, agreed to outline a letter to the president presenting their argument for higher wages, or at least no further reductions. A committee of union executives was appointed by B. M. Jewell, president of the Railway Employees department of the American Federation of Labor, to draft the letters.

Approximately $110,000,000 will be lopped from the pay rolls of the 400,000 shop crafts and the 500,000 maintenance of way men under orders of the board July 1.

The new rates of pay will range from 54 cents an hour for mechanics' helpers to 70 cents for mechanics. The maintenance of way men will get from 23 to 35 cents an hour. These rates were branded as "starvation wages" by the union leaders and it is their intention in the letter to President Harding, to demand whether the country's chief executive thinks these wages sufficient "to maintain an American standard of living and properly sustain a family."

Rules Man Hit in Street Was Still a Passenger.

Muskegon—The Muskegon supreme court again has ruled that a person is a passenger on a common carrier until he reaches the sidewalk and revised the ruling in Circuit Court here in the suit brought by Mrs. Agnes Quinn to force the New York Life Insurance Co. to pay double the face value of the $4,000 policy carried by her husband.

Mr. Quinn alighted from a street car and was struck by a taxicab and killed. The court first directed a verdict for the widow, but later held the extra $4,000 could not be collected, and the Supreme Court reversed the second finding.

"Whisky," he replied.

"Where bound?"

"Cuba," was the reply, and clearance papers from Canada were shown to prove it.

And he sculled away with his cargo.

Mercersburg, Pa.—Vice-President Calvin Coolidge, speaking here at the breaking of ground for Mercersburg Academy's $400,000 chapel, emphasized the value of the simpler things of life. "We are giving too much attention to what we think are the great things in life, and too little attention to those things that appear small, perhaps insignificant, perhaps unimportant," said Mr. Coolidge. Bishop Charles D. Williams, of Detroit, represented the church at the ceremonies.

Outja Board Definition Refused.

Washington—The Supreme Court has announced it would not determine what is an outja board. The question was presented in a case brought by the Baltimore Talking Board Co., which protested against the taxation of such boards as sporting goods and insisted that should the Court refuse to hold that the board "is a grade of motor automatism, involving considerable subconscious action of intelligence, that it would at least classify the smaller boards as 'children's toys'."

REFUNDS SHORT-DATED BONDS

About Half Billion of U. S. Victory Notes Are Exchanged.

While the amount of the new three and one-half year four and one-half per cent treasury notes which will be accepted in exchange for four and three-fourths per cent notes has not been determined, it was thought probable that as much as $500,000,000 of the victory notes would be exchanged.

There are approximately $2,000,000,000 outstanding of four and three-quarters per cent victory notes which mature in May, 1923.

True Detective Stories

THE DEVONSHIRE DIAMONDS

Copyright by The Wheeler Syndicate, Inc.

HAD Lady Alberta Devon not yielded to temptation at the last moment and stepped out of her boudoir to secure her sister's opinion upon the effect of her latest Parisian creation it is quite possible that Inspector John Sweeney of Scotland Yard would not have had the opportunity of proving his detective genius in a peculiarly striking manner.

Lady Alberta was absent from her room for less than ten minutes; but during that time occurred an event which, for several hours, threatened to disrupt several of the highest social circles in England.

It was the night of the Devon ball, held in the big old-fashioned house in the center of the Devon estate. As was to be expected, the list of guests read like a section from Burke's Peerage—a fact which made Inspector Sweeney's work distinctly more difficult when the loss of the famous necklace of Devonshire was reported to Scotland Yard.

Early in the evening Lady Alberta had dismissed her maid with the statement that she would complete her toilette herself, but just as she was about to put on her necklace—an heirloom which had greatly increased in value because of its historic connections—she thought it would be well to secure an unbiased opinion as to the effect of her gown, which had just arrived from Paris. When she returned from her sister's room a few minutes later she reached for the necklace, only to discover that it had vanished!

Positive that she had had it in her hands less than ten minutes before, she searched the room and then summoned her husband, whom she told of the mysterious loss.

"There is only one thing to do," declared his lordship, after verifying his wife's statement that the jewels were missing, "and that is to notify the police."

Inspector Sweeney reached the Devon house shortly after midnight, while the ball was still in progress, and secured the meager details of the case directly from her ladyship.

"Did you notice any one in the hall as you passed through on the way to your sister's room?" Sweeney asked.

"No one at all."

"How long has your maid been with you?"

"Less than two months—but she came well recommended."

Finally, in spite of protests, the operative from Scotland Yard gave orders that no one was to leave the grounds of the Devon estate without his permission, and, as the ball formed part of a week's festivities, it was possible to arrange this without mentioning the reason for the request to the guests. Armed with a list of those present, with their servants, Sweeney then repaired to Lady Devon's boudoir to commence active investigations.

His knowledge of London society was sufficient to inform him that at least three of the guests, despite their titles, might easily have been guilty of lifting the necklace if the opportunity had presented itself.

"The question is," mused Sweeney, "who could have known that Lady Devon would have been out of the room for just those few moments? She was not summoned by any messenger and it would therefore appear that some one was hiding in the hope that an opportunity would present itself. That would seem to eliminate the guests—but not the servants."

Working along this line, Sweeney made a careful examination of the toilet articles on the dressing table where the diamonds had been placed. After a thorough scrutiny of the perfume bottles, pieces of silver and other articles which were highly polished, the detective made his way downstairs and sent word to Lady Devon that he would like to speak to her for a moment.

"Your ladyship," he said, "will you kindly press the tips of your fingers lightly on this," and he held out one of the hand mirrors from the boudoir.

"No," he added, "I'm not suspecting you of making away with your own diamonds—I merely wish to discover which finger-prints are yours."

"Then, a moment later, 'Thank you. I thought as much.'"

"Now," he continued, "I want you to instruct your butler—whom I understand has been with you for a number of years—to secure the prints of all the servants under your roof. Tell him to make any excuse for it that he wants to, but I must secure a complete collection. Kindly have them sent to my room the first thing in the morning. Meanwhile, don't worry. If my instructions are rigidly carried out, your necklace should be discovered before nine o'clock."

But Sweeney underestimated by some two hours. It was eleven o'clock on the following morning before he received the complete set of finger-prints, and ten minutes later a pair of handcuffs was dangling from the wrists of William Sinclair, valet of one of the Devonshire mansions, who had developed a man with a lengthy prison record. The necklace was discovered stowed away in the false bottom of Sinclair's trunk.

As Sweeney started back toward London with his prisoner he cautioned him to be more careful in the future not to attempt a theft unless he wore gloves.

"Beyond the Pale"

In the time of King John that part of Ireland which was subject to English rule was divided into 12 counties, and the entire district was known as the Pale. From this originated the expression "beyond the pale," meaning outside the law or beyond jurisdiction. Inside the Pale, English law was acknowledged and obeyed, while the land outside was in an almost constant state of uproar and dissension.

AVERAGE

The law of averages is mathematical in its accuracy. When a scientifically managed chain store system wants to open a new shop, it has "clockers" count the passing crowds, to learn what location has the most traffic flowing past its doors. It is definitely known that a set percentage of the passers-by will turn into the new store. This is the law of averages—that, while a thing may not happen repeatedly, it will show up, on the average, every-so-often. Gamblers use the law of averages, figuring systems to beat the bank at Monte Carlo. It is a law that should be taken into consideration in all proposed undertakings.

All About Kisses.

Kisses are the language of love; or, perhaps, it would be truer to say, its secret code. Items could be written about the psychology of a kiss and yet nothing be explained, for the kiss is its own explanation; and as one state differs from another in glory, so too two kisses are alike. There are those that are bought and sold, wretched kisses held before the indignant face of love; and there are sophisticated kisses, the part of a game both understood, and the betrothal kiss, sanctified already by the shadow of the altar; and the sudden, snatched kiss, the kiss of mystery that instantly alters life, when it is not a mere farcical interlude. —From "His Grace Gives Notice," by Lady Trowbridge.

How to Make and Use It

By A. HYATT VERRILL

RADIO AN OUTGROWTH OF THE WAR

We usually think of the great war as a disaster and as having done an incalculable amount of harm to the world and its people, but it is very doubtful if the war did as much harm as good. Within the few years it lasted it resulted in immense benefits to mankind in the tremendous discoveries, improvements and advancement of medicine, surgery, chemistry, aeronautics, mechanics, engineering, metallurgy and wireless communication, and while the toll of life, the destruction of property, the devastation of lands, the loss of art and the bankruptcy of nations are all temporary and will soon be replaced and forgotten, the scientific progress and discoveries, which were a direct result of the war, will endure forever and will continue to benefit mankind.

Of all the arts and sciences which received an unprecedented impetus by the war, none is of greater interest or has a more far-reaching effect to the average person than radio telephony. Before the war wireless telephony was well established, universally used and a fairly exact and well-understood science; but wireless telephony was scarcely more than a dream—a visionary, uncertain thing; complicated, little understood and literally in its infancy.

But today, so incredibly rapid have been the strides made in the development of this science, that wireless telephony is an every-day affair; a simple, easily understood thing—far simpler than telegraphy—and in constant use, not only commercially, but by countless thousands of amateurs. In a way, however, the war merely launched practical radio telephony on its career and far greater progress has been made in commercializing, simplifying and cheapening it within the past four months—October to February, 1921—than within the previous six years. Indeed, so rapid has been its advancement, that it seems to have come upon us almost overnight, and within a few short weeks it has leaped from an obscure, scientific curiosity to an almost universally used means of entertainment and profit.

Today thousands of mere boys are using wireless telephones—many of the instruments made by the boys themselves—and in department stores, electrical supply stores and elsewhere sets for receiving may be purchased for a few dollars. From various stations, music, crop reports, market reports, weather reports, speeches, songs, operas, plays, stories, official time, racing and baseball returns; shipping news and countless other interesting matters are sent broadcast through the air, free to anyone who possesses a wireless telephone receiving set. Thus, the farmer, miles from the nearest town, the sailor at sea, passengers on ships, guests in hotels, crowds about bulletin boards and people in their own homes can listen to the voices of famous men, the music of bands and orchestras, the singing of famous operatic stars, the dialogues of plays and countless other things, from far-distant points and as clearly and plainly as though no space intervened.

Truly, radio telephony is the greatest modern miracle; a dream more fantastic and fairy-like than the Arabian Nights; a more marvelous actuality than the fabulous lamp of Aladdin or the flying carpet, and, best of all, it is within the reach of everyone, while the "music in the air" is free to all who care to listen in.

It is certainly a strange, almost incredible, thing to think that the air about us, even within our dwellings, is constantly filled with sounds, voices, music, messages and songs which are as inaudible as they are invisible, but which may be caught and delivered to our ears by means of a few wires and batteries and a few appliances so simple that even a child may use them.

And the limit is far from being reached. Within a few years or even months, the range of wireless telephony will be increased by hundreds or even thousands of miles, antennae or aerials will be entirely done away with and the instruments for sending and receiving will be so improved, simplified and reduced that one may carry them in one's pocket, for while radio telephony has already become highly perfected, widely used and absolutely practical, yet it is still hardly out of its infancy and no man may prophesy what its future may be.

PRINCIPLES OF WIRELESS TRANSMISSION

Before attempting to explain the functions and the principles of the radio telephones, or describing how to make, use and operate them, it is necessary to understand something of the underlying principles and fundamental laws of wireless transmission.

It is not, however, necessary to enter into a long discussion on the theories and principles of electricity or physics which enter into the subject, but merely to illustrate and make clear a few important and salient laws, causes and results which make the transmission of sounds possible without the use of wires between the sending and receiving instruments.

The first and most important principle of all radio transmission is the fact that all our atmosphere is constantly disturbed by vibrations or oscillations or, as we may call them for the sake of simplicity, waves. We are accustomed to think of the atmosphere about us as a more or less uniform substance which we call air, but in reality the air or atmosphere, space, and in fact all solids as well as are pervaded by an invisible, odorless, and almost weightless but exceedingly elastic substance known as ether or luminiferous ether. It is by means of this ether that all heat, light, electricity, etc., are transmitted, in the form of waves or vibrations. Light and heat waves have been known to science for a long time, but it is only within comparatively recent years that man has learned that electric or electro-magnetic waves also travel through the ether, and it was through this discovery, and by means of these waves, that wireless telegraphy and telephony became possible. In a way, the electro-magnetic waves are very similar to the waves or ripples formed by dropping a stone in a calm pool of water, for, just as the water waves travel in gradually widening circles from the splash, so the electric waves, started by the spark of a wireless transmitting or sending instrument, spread in ever-widening circles through the ether. Moreover, just as the waves in the pool are short and clear near the spot where the stone is thrown and gradually become longer and less noticeable and farther apart as they flow from the splash, so wireless waves are clearer and sharper near the instrument and decrease in clearness and size as they get farther and farther away and, to draw still another comparison, just as the shore of the pool or any object in the water interrupts or breaks the waves, so a wireless receiving instrument will interrupt or receive the electrical waves of the ether. Indeed, just as the waves or vibrations set up by the wireless spark are electro-magnetic waves and the energy that starts them is electrical energy, so the waves in the pool are started by muscular or mechanical energy. You can readily understand how it would be possible to communicate by means of such liquid waves, for, if a person at a distance should toss stones into the water at stated intervals, a person watching the shore, and noticing the intervals of the waves, could understand signals which had been prearranged. This, of course, would be a very crude and uncertain method of communication; but if you could devise some instrument to count and measure the waves and could devise means for creating waves of definite sizes and numbers, a practical means of communication could be established. It is just this which occurs in the transmission and reception of electro-magnetic or wireless waves, for, by breaking or interrupting the waves sent out by the spark they are transformed into long and short sections which correspond to dots and dashes as used in wireless telegraphy. The waves set in motion by the sending apparatus, possess the property of starting oscillations in any conductor which they strike, and if they strike the aerial or antenna of a wireless station they start oscillations in the wires but so faint and weak that they would not be detected unless sensitive instruments were provided to magnify and catch them. Such instruments are known as detectors and consist of various substances or devices which are adjustable and from which wires lead to a telephone receiver. The high frequency oscillations of the ether, which are known as alternating currents, as they flow back and forth, are cut off by the magnets in the receiver, while the detector is designed to allow the oscillations to pass through in one direction, but will not allow them to return, and thus it acts as a check-valve in a water pipe and the alternating, back-and-forth currents are transformed into impulses going in one direction only and known as direct currents. These will flow through a telephone receiver and cause the diaphragm to vibrate, and thus the ear detects the interrupted buzzing sounds which indicate the dots and dashes of the code. Another very important part of the mechanism of the wireless apparatus is the tuner, for without this the various vibrations of the ether sent out from numerous wireless stations would come as a hodge-podge of meaningless sounds to the receiver. But by arranging the receiving instrument so it may be adjusted to receive or pick up only those waves of a certain length, all other vibrations, and the messages they carry are eliminated or cut out. So, the wireless operator who is receiving messages, may adjust his instrument back and forth until he picks up any message which may be passing through the ether at the time.

BANK PREACHES THRIFT BY RADIO

If you happen to be within range of Dayton, O., you will soon hear something like this: "Save your nickels, save your dimes," etc. The City National bank of that city has installed a transmitting station. In addition to encouraging thrift the bank will broadcast regularly financial advice, quotations on local bond and stock issues, warnings of activities of bogus promoters and other information of value to the investor.

WHAT MAKES RADIO WORK?

Of the many explanations offered as to how the radio waves travel from the transmitter to the receiver, a new theory was given by Prof. J. A. Fleming, a well-known radio authority in England, before the Royal Society of Arts. His explanation was that there is a highly conducting layer in the upper regions of the atmosphere, in which the component waves are trapped and held. The conductivity of this strata is probably due to electrified dust which comes to us from the sun, from which it is repelled by the radiation pressure against the gravitation attraction. This conducting layer guides the radio waves around the earth and prevents them from escaping into space.

Making Connections.

Instead of soldering connections in the aerial, an ordinary clean glass joint can be made, covered with tin foil and then taped. This will keep out moisture and last a long time.

REGARD FOR HEROES' WISHES

Judge Neterer of Seattle Holds Re-quest of Soldier Killed in War Demands First Consideration.

Is the last wish of a soldier dying on the field of battle more to be respected than legal forms decked out with sealing wax? The American Legion thinks it is. Recent cases before the courts have brought the question to the front. According to Federal Judge Neterer of Seattle, the wish of a soldier killed in battle is higher law than any departmental regulation. According to this decision Agnes Claffy, sixteen-year old niece of Clarence Swank, is awarded the residue of Swank's estate, amounting to $9,000. Swank was killed in France. Departmental red tape cluttered up the case on account of the death of Swank's mother, the original beneficiary. In handing down his decision Judge Neterer cited precedents extending back to the days of Caesar and the legions of ancient Rome.

The latest case is that of Miss Eleanor R. Knapp of New York, whose claim to the estate of Ernest Charlton Mason of the One Hundred and Sixth United States Infantry has been contested by Mason's uncle. In a muddy dugout before a general advance against the Germans, Mason told his buddies, Oscar Westgate, the story of his engagement, and added that he now felt that in this advance he was slated to "go West." "If I don't come through this," he said, "as they started over the top, I want Eleanor to have all my estate."

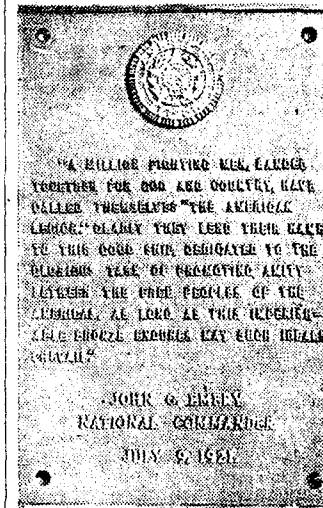

Mason, among others, was cut off and captured by the Germans. They were taken to the same prison camp. For ten days, a bundle testified, Mason lay ill on the ground with influenza. Then he was taken away in an ambulance and his death reported. Eventually a death certificate was issued by the United States government. But the attorneys for Mason's uncle contested the case to the extent of arguing that the "proof of death" was unsatisfactory.

The justice of the soldier's latest will has been upheld in startling fashion by the highest courts of England recently. An English major of infantry died alone in his lodgings in London directly after the armistice. He left no legal will. Across the front of a photograph of his fiancée he had hastily scrawled: "All to her." The case was brought before the highest tribunal of England and the "will" stood.

Send Diseased Poultry to France. The Germans are inoculating with cholera the fowls they are delivering the French under the reparations agreements, according to French biologists. It was noticed that the poultry sent in from Germany soon died. Prompt inquiries on the dead fowls disclosed the cholera germ. The Paris Matin, one of the greatest French newspapers, calls for a government investigation.

"Well, want to marry my daughter, I suppose?" snipped the grouchy millionaire as he gazed at the timid youth. Adjusting his glasses he added: "By the way, aren't you one of my daughter's former suitors?" "No-o-o sir," faltered the cheerless one, "but I expect I soon will be." —American Legion Weekly.

Legion and Auxiliary Flowers.

The white American daisy has been adopted by the American Legion as its official flower after objections were raised to the Flanders poppy as a foreign flower and a possible pest in gardens and farms. The poppy has been adopted as its memorial flower by the Auxiliary, which has no official flower. It will not be brought into the country, but artificial poppies made by the ex-soldiers in hospitals were on sale on Memorial day all over the country for the benefit of the sick and wounded who made them.

COULD NOT HIT A LICK FOR MONTHS

Petersburg Resident Says She Had About Last Hope of Getting Better—Now Well and Happy.

"Tanlac has been such a blessing to me I can't help singing its praises," said Mrs. T. J. Archer, highly esteemed resident of 1147 Shepard St., Petersburg, Va.

"I had indigestion so bad I couldn't eat a thing without being in misery for hours, and the pain around my heart caused by the gas seemed all I could stand. I constantly had headaches and awful spells of dizziness. Then to make matters worse rheumatism in my arms, shoulders and knees almost drove me to distraction, and for three months I couldn't do a stroke of work."

"I had just about decided it was no use to take any more medicine when my husband brought me a bottle of Tanlac. Now I never have a touch of indigestion. Headaches and dizzy spells are a thing of the past, and rheumatism has left me entirely. I never have known a medicine to equal Tanlac."

Tanlac is sold by all good druggists.

FARM BUREAU NOTES.

ago, Michigan.

Those counties run almost exclusively to Holsteins. So much, that when anyone, in any part of the United States wishes to make up a carload of choice animals to equip some new farm, they go right to those places, for the buyer knows that he will have large numbers to pick from and can find what he wants.

Same with Waukesha, Wisconsin, for Guernseys.

Same with Delaware County, Ohio, for Percheron horses.

Where Would You Look To-Day?

Where would you look to-day in Northern Michigan for a few head of good cows?

We have few, if any neighborhoods, producing them in selling quantities. I know several people in Crawford County who wish to buy really good cows, and cannot find them. They will have to be satisfied with the scrub stock of the county or go to the vicinity of Saginaw, Vassar, Mt. Pleasant or Howell.

Dead and Gone.

You and I will be dead and gone before Crawford County will have too many registered purebreds; or, even high grades.

The county itself can absorb several thousand, and could sell several thousand to outside buyers.

Keep Right On.

Keep right on brother in your spirit to improve. There will be plenty who will tell you that you are headed straight for financial ruin, or that you got exactly the wrong kind of cattle.

Let 'em holler, brother; let 'em holler.

Felt Better.

In the summer of 1919 I was back to that part of Vermont where my ancestors were living before the Revolution, or before Washington's time.

One fine, progressive man, who had lived there but a few years, had launched out courageously and had 26 registered pure-bred Holstein cows, and a lot of pure-bred calves and heifers; and, of course, was away ahead of his neighbors, who had been hesitating or debating for the last hundred years whether to get a purebred bull or not; or going without one. Mind you, this is strictly a dairy community and has been for 150 years.

For Mr. Roberts to come in there and flash a purebred head before their eyes was as intolerable as it would be were you to build a neat little bungalow, with running hot and cold water, lighting system among the squalid cabins of the poor whites of the South.

When I went back in 1921 and found that Mr. Roberts had had an auction and sold some of his blue-blooded cows, and had replaced them with some not so good, for he had bit of too big a chunk to chew at one time; great was the rejoicing among the do nothings, for now, he who had dared to try to do something was back to their level, and they felt better.

Eating Him Back.

The same spirit of jealousy, and a desire to trip up anyone who tried to do anything better than they is found in places among us.

Down South, among the negroes it is said, that when one, by thrift and diligence, got ahead of his friends and relatives, they would go to visit him and "eat him back" until he was as poor again as the rest. Then they felt better.

In some people's opinion, no one should try to do anything progressive or better than his neighbors.

The State Fair.

Aren't you going to take especial pains with something on your farm this year, and have it ready for the State Fair?

You wish to be fair about this, don't you, and do your share?

Capt. Stevens Aerial Photographs Drops 24,206 Feet to Safety.

Dayton, O.—Captain A. W. Stevens, aerial photographer, McCook Field, established a new parachute jumping record Monday when he descended 24,206 feet to safety. Another record was broken at the same time when Lieutenant Leigh Wade piloted a twin-motored Martin bomber, carrying three passengers to an altitude of 24,206 feet, it was announced.

Captain Stevens ascended in the same plane with Lieutenant Wade. The pilot, accompanied by Stevens and Sergeant Roy Langham, observer, took off at 11 a. m. and reached the maximum altitude at 1:05 p. m. requiring two hours and five minutes to make the climb.

GAS WILL BE USED, SAYS SIMS

Naval Officer Declares Chemical Warfare Is Not Inhuman.

Albany, N. Y.—"You can bet your life that if we have another war and if we're attacked we'll use gas," said Rear Admiral William S. Sims, U. S. N., Monday night at the annual dinner of the Albany Medical College alumni association. "If we are attacked we will use gas," he continued, "and we won't care how, when or why."

Gas, he declared, is not the inhuman method of warfare that it generally is believed to be. The general impression that the use of gas was so inhuman, he said, was caused by Allied propaganda because the Germans were using it.
